

Come Play "THE GAME" at Black Rock Branch Library

People “play” with The Game, and then are able to express interactively what they perceive they have created, how their creation inspires thoughts of diversity and unity, as well as possibility. The Game is central to a series of workshops based on a growing body of research that values ‘play’ as an ideal context for learning and overall human development.

“The Game” is an interactive, conceptual sculpture created by Bridgeport Gallery 1212’s Gerald Moore.

Using acrylic shapes you will build individually and in teams representative sculptures that require them to “Be creative and play.” This workshop will inspire everyone in creative play and will encourage everyone to explore their own creativity.
